8 Ways to Greater Safety for You and Your Student

A Message from District 227

"We believe that working collaboratively with parents, students and teachers provides the most effective means of educating our students regarding safety and security measures."

--Dr. Donna Simpson Leak, Superintendent

1. Review the student handbook and share with your student.
2. Monitor exposure to violence in the media and its real-life consequences.
3. Teach students how to solve problems peacefully.
4. Take an active role in your student's education.
5. Participate in school safety planning sessions.
6. Establish a network to exchange information with other parents.
7. Monitor and supervise use of the Internet.
8. Maintain open lines of communication to promote honest dialogue.
